Programme

How do you plan for your next step in your career and how do you develop actions and steps towards it?
Which skills are important for your career development as a researcher and which areas should you focus on developing taking into account your career aspirations?

This training consists in three online webinars:

1. “Your day for planning and managing your research career” to guide the participants in identifying their strengths and possible areas for development, with a view to planning the next steps of their careers:
   - December 10th 2021, h 11,30am-5pm for Assegnisti di ricerca (research fellows)
   - January 21st 2022, h 11,30am-5pm for RTD-A
   The webinars are open up to 30 participants.

2. “Imposter Syndrome: what is it and is it holding you back from being at your best?”, 11th February, h 11am-1pm
   Have you ever felt you were not worthy the role you were assigned or that your success has been due to some mysterious luck and not to your own capacities? You have felt like an “imposter”!
   This webinar is aimed at anyone who wants to consider how feeling like an imposter may impact their work as researchers and explore ways of dealing with it.
   The webinar is open up to 30 participants.

Further information and registration: https://www.researchers.polito.it/novita/(idnews)/17659