DISTANT TALKS

PhDs Behind the Scenes

Gender and the City: Perspectives from the Global South

Moderators:

Saanchi Saxena and Sofia Rivera, Politecnico di Torino

Speakers:

Shilpa Phadke, Tata Institute of Social Sciences, Mumbai;

Sofia Zaragocin, Universidad San Francisco de Quito.

This talk is a conversation between two researchers doing ground-breaking work in the field of gender and urban studies in the Global South. We seek to put a variety of perspectives in dialogue, questioning the gendered division between private space (reproductive) vs public space (productive), the colonial disconnection between body and territory, as well as discussing the various strategies of resistance to reclaim urban public space for all.

Shilpa Phadke is a Professor at the Centre for the Study of Contemporary Culture, School of Media and Cultural Studies at TISS, Mumbai, India. Her work includes gender and the politics of space, sexuality and the body, feminist parenting, friendship, reclaiming fun and pleasure as acts of feminist resistance, and loitering as a form of gendered dissent in cities.

Sofía Zaragocín is Professor and co-Director, Coordinator Gender and Territory Institute for Advanced Studies on Inequalities (IEAD), San Francisco de Quito University, Ecuador. Her work includes processes of death-body-territory in cross-border spaces, the geopolitics of the uterus, mapping the criminalization of abortion, and 'cuerpo-territorio' as a decolonial feminist method.
